JOB TITLE: Economics & Money Editor, VICE News Canada (6-month contract)

REPORTS TO: Deputy Editor and VICE News Canada Managing Editor

OVERVIEW: The Economics and Money Editor will oversee the creation and execution of all VICE News Canada's economics and money coverage, with the goal of making the site the web's premier visual news destination. The position will require working with VICE correspondents, producers and editors to determine coverage style, rhythm, and tone of VICE's Canadian economic coverage on the web. In short: we are looking for a brilliant journalist to help us figure out how VICE should cover economics.

ROLES & RESPONSIBILITIES:

- Tell the story of Canadian economics through online reporting but with a focus on visually compelling packaging—through charts and, when possible, motion graphics
- Equal parts reporting, editing, and commissioning of pieces, as well as uploading stories to the website, though the position could be modified for candidates with more specific skills
- Work closely with US and international offices, as well as collaborate across departments within the Canadian office
- Some administrative duties such as maintaining budgets

QUALIFICATIONS:

- Minimum 3 years of experience in related editorial field
- Deep knowledge of economics and personal finance
- Proven ability to frame news creatively on the web, either as a reporter or as an editor or both
- Genuine interest in how economics underpins culture
- Knowledge of video production an asset
- Access to a network of freelance reporters in the financial world

HOW TO APPLY:

Please send a detailed cover letter and resume by email to jobscanada@vice.com. Reference "Economics & Money Editor, VICE News Canada" in the subject field. No phone calls please.
